

A process activity captured in the UPN format already contains all the key information you need to form a user story.

When you capture a business process diagram, each activity represents a user story that needs to be implemented to support the entire user journey.

An activity (your user story) is therefore never an isolated ticket. You can always understand how it fits the whole picture.

